ETRUSCO

Etruscans were a people who settled in Etruria (present day Tuscany, Umbria and Latium) in Italy shortly after the Trojan War, around 1000BC.

The historical importance of the Etruscans lies in their influence on early Rome, especially during the 500's BC when Rome itself grew from a village to a city and became prosperous and powerful.

Traditional Tuscan cuisine goes back three thousand years and is based on a love of wine, freshly pressed olive oil and bread. Tuscany remains very much a civilisation in which wine is not just a drink but a flavouring and an ingredient.
